“Urgencies”

Gideon MAASLAND, Director MVRDV, The Netherlands

We live in a world full of crises, where multiple problems are inter-connected. Can more compact cities play a role in sustainability? And if so, how to make that in such a way that people find their right place to live which is green, open and social? How do existing buildings play a role in this? And how to technically make this possible? What kind of tools do we need?

Case studies: The Valley, Tripolis.
